Welcome Address

4th European Universities Karate Championship

I am very pleased to welcome all the athletes, officials and guests to the 4th European Universities Karate Championship.

First of all, let me express my personal congratulations to the Organising Committee for the hard work put in the organisation of this Championship. To them I would like to wish all the best.

It is not the first time that the Spanish Committee of University Sport with its members organises such an important event and I am convinced that they will once again show their extraordinary ability to run such a prestigious Championship, as already proven in the past.

This year the European University Sports Association (EUSA) celebrates the 10th Anniversary of its foundation in 1999. To the Executive Committee, EUSA Members, Technical Delegates, Secretariat and STC Members it goes my heartfelt gratitude for their commitment and dedication aimed at improving the University Sport activity in these 10 years of EUSA activity, contributing to the success of our Association which is today the model adopted by other Continental Associations in the World.

It is also thanks to all the former Executive Committee Members, Honorary President Enno Harms and all our family that EUSA has achieved the outstanding success we witness today.

Furthermore, I would like to thank all the students who have been taking part in our events during these years and to those who are going to participate in our events in 2009, not only competing for the best placing in our Championships, but also for their will to spread out the Olympic spirit across Europe.

I hope you will bring with you this sensational spirit in everyday life as you are the symbol of our future society.

Welcome to EUC Karate 2009!

Alberto Gualtieri,
President

CÓRDOBA

Córdoba is a city in Andalusia, southern Spain, and the capital of the province of Córdoba. Located at 37.88° North, 4.77° West, on the Guadalquivir river, it was founded in ancient Roman times as Corduba by Claudius Marcellus. Its population in 2008 was 325,453.

Today a moderately-sized modern city, the old town contains many impressive architectural reminders of when Cordova was the thriving capital of the Caliphate of Cordoba that governed almost all of the Iberian peninsula. It has been estimated that Cordoba, with up to 500,000 inhabitants in the tenth century, was the largest city in Western Europe and, perhaps, in the world.

Important buildings

Religious architecture

- Great Mosque of Cordoba: The mosque, which contains columns that date back to the Roman and Visigothic periods, was primarily constructed during the Umayyad period (its construction started in 784), and was converted to a Cathedral after the Reconquista.
- Córdoba Synagogue (14th century)
- Fernandine and Alphonsine-style churches (13th century)
- Various monasteries and convents
- Walcha Cave (built in 1489)

- Palace of Viana with its flowered patios (16th century)
- Royal residences and palaces
- The Tower of Calahorra (14th century)
- The Door of the Bridge (16th century)
- The Plaza Vieja or Plaza Mayor
- Walls and towers of the Muslim and also Christian period

Archaeological sites

- Roman archaeological remains (temple, mausoleum)
- Islamic archaeological remains (minarets preserved in the churches, Arab baths)
- Archaeological site of Madinat Al-Zahra (10th century)
- The Roman Bridge

Parks and Gardens

- Garden of the Victory
- Garden of the Rivas Duc
- Garden of the Agriculture

Famous people born in Cordova and its province

Cordova was the birthplace of five famous philosophers and religious scholars:

- In Roman times the Stoic philosopher Seneca,
- In classical Islamic times
  - The Islamic scholar ibn Hazm, a major Muslim theologian and legal jurist,
  - The Islamic scholar ibn Rushd or Averroes, one of Islam's most famous and eminent scholars and philosophers,
  - Imam Abu 'Abdullah al-Qurtubi, a leading jurist of the Maliki madhab, and
  - The Jewish rabbi and philosopher Moses Maimonides.

Cordova was also the birthplace of

- The Roman poet Lucan,
- The medieval Spanish poet Juan de Mena, and
- The Renaissance poet Luis de Góngora, who lived most of his life and wrote all his most important works but one in Cordoba.

In addition some scholars have linked to Cordoba

- The Renaissance philosopher Abraham Cohen de Herrera and
- The prominent Jewish mystic Moses ben Jacob Cordovero

Both of these were evidently descended from families which lived in Cordova before the expulsion of the Jews from Spain.

More recently, several flamenco artists were born here as well, including

- Vicente Amigo
- Joaquín Cortés
- Fosforito
- Paco Peña

Location

The Province of Cordoba covers a surface area of 13.718 km<sup>2</sup>, taking in 75 municipalities.

Cordoba is flanked to the north by the Sierra Morena, by the Sierra Subbética to the south, and is divided by the basin of the Guadalquivir. To the north, Cordoba borders on the Provinces of Ciudad Real and Badajoz, and is flanked to the west by the Province of Seville, to the east, by the province Jaén and to the south, by the provinces of Málaga and Granada. The capital city lies on the banks of the Guadalquivir at an altitude of 106 m, covering a surface area of 1245 km<sup>2</sup> and separated from Madrid by 402 km.

Córdoba: How to get there

Córdoba is strategically located as a result of its privileged geographical position. Situated in the southwestern extremity of the European continent, the province is entered from the north via the Sierra Morena, the final link with the Castilian meseta, which opens onto the Valle del Guadalquivir [Guadalquivir Valley], an alpine basin that separates the Sierra Morena from the Betic Cordillera.

Córdoba lies in a strategic position, communicating and acting as a point of contact between Europe and Africa, less than two hours away (by air), train or sea, from any point within the Iberian Peninsula.
